SALVATION ARMY
MAKES BIG HIT
WITH THE ARMY

RELIGIOUS SERVICE THE SMALLEST PART OF THE ENTERTAINMENT.

(By Associated Press.)

LONDON, Oct. 27.—The Salvation Army has made a hit with Tommy Atkins. Three thousand of him may be seen any day at the recreation tent which the Salvation Army maintains at Colchester, devouring some twenty-five dozen pork pies, having a look at the magazines and newspapers, writing letters home, and occasionally participating in some religious service. But the demands for food have been so great that the army has as yet had little time for song and prayer.

Commissioner Higgins, formerly in New York with Commander Eya Booth, directed the work of these recreation centers. In addition to service at home, there are five hundred selected Salvation Army officers who have offered themselves for work with the British Red Cross and stand ready to enter the field whenever needed.

Although the charges made for food and drink are very slight, General Booth estimates he can maintain a refreshment and amusement tent for a year on seven hundred and fifty dollars. The Salvationists charge only two cents a cup for tea and the same for bread and butter or a pork pie. Cool weather is making the tents unsatisfactory and moveable buildings of corrugated iron are rapidly replacing the canvas shelters.

JAPANESE CRUISER HOVERING AROUND APPROACH TO HONOLULU.

(By International News Service.)
SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 27.—The Japanese cruiser Hizen is hovering three miles outside Honolulu harbor waiting to pounce upon the German gunboat Grier as soon as she clears from port, according to officers and passengers of the liner Matson who arrived in port today. The Hizen expects hourly to see the Grier steam out of harbor, as she is reported having her repairs nearly completed.

Voters of Nevada

TO THE REPUBLICAN VOTERS OF NEVADA:
At the Republican State Convention, held in the City of Carson on September 23rd, 1914, the following resolution was adopted by such convention:

"WHEREAS, Mr. R. A. McKay, on the invitation of this convention has appeared before it and made a clear and convincing statement of the circumstances attending his nomination for the office of attorney-general and that the same was for no other purpose than to carry out the understanding between the Republican and Progressive party nominating candidates for the office of attorney-general and state printer, without Republican opposition, and

"WHEREAS, Mr. McKay has requested this convention and through it the Republican party of the state to ignore his candidacy and support Hon. George Springmeyer, the Progressive nominee in his stead; now therefore

"RESOLVED, That the thanks of this convention be tendered Mr. McKay for his courageous and manly action in the premises; that his withdrawal from the list of active Republican candidates be accepted, and that this convention endorse the candidacy of Hon.
Fred J. Trimmer for the office of state printer and hereby pledge the Republican party to their unequalled support at the polls."

I desire to respectfully and earnestly urge the Republican voters of the state to carry out the terms of the above resolution.
Dated, Carson City, Nevada, October 16th, 1914.

R. A. McKAY.

DAILY SPORTING LETTER

By Frank G. Menke, International News Service

NEW YORK, Oct. 28.—The absence of Charley Brickley from the Harvard line-up has robbed the three big football games in the east this year of some of their interest. Brickley was considered as about one-half of the Harvard team, and there are many who believe now that Harvard will not have much of a show against Michigan on the 31st, against Princeton on November 7th and against Yale on November 21st.

For the sake of the game, it is to be hoped that Percy Hughtitt, the wizard coach of Harvard, can, in the limited time that is his, develop a team that will not feel the loss of Brickley as keenly as the football public fears. Harvard's offense and a great part of its defense was built around its wonderful fullback, and since he was removed from the lineup by an appendicitis operation, the Harvard team has moved like a ship without a rudder.

The early indications were that every seat would be sold for the three big games in which Harvard is to figure. It now is reported that many of those who had made application for seats for the Michigan, Princeton and Yale games have canceled their requests simply because they feel that Harvard without Brick-ley will not be able to put up a real battle against the three powerful foes.

However, the fact that Hughtitt, the great Michigan quarterback, has been forced out of the game by injuries, and may not be able to play against Harvard on Saturday, somewhat equalizes things. Hughtitt, wonderful as he is, is not as wonderful as Brickley, but Michigan will feel his loss almost as much as Harvard will feel Brickley's. Hughtitt was the driving force behind the Michigan machine.

Harvard nurses the hope that Brickley, who is now recovering rapidly from his operation, may be able to play against Yale on the 21st. His doctors are quoted as saying that he may be able to play without danger of injury. But if Brickley plays in the game against Yale it won't be the Brickley of old. No man can hop off an operating table, after a major operation, and perform with full vigor six weeks afterward in a game as strenuous as football. Brickley won't get his full strength back for another six months.

If Brickley is in good shape by November 21st he may break into the game—but only for a few minutes during each period. Harvard probably wouldn't attempt to put him into the game except to give him a chance to test his boot when the team has carried the ball within striking distance of the Yale goal—if it does. Brickley hardly would be able to stick through the entire game or to attempt any line smashing.

Yale and Michigan supporters share the Harvard regret over Brickley's misfortune. The Eli grads and those of Michigan have a feeling that their teams are able to beat Harvard with Brickley or without him. Victory for Yale or Michigan this year over Harvard would lose half its zest because both of Harvard's rivals want to triumph over the best team that Harvard ever had.

The old Yale spirit and the old Yale power seems to be back again.
The Yale team this year looks better than any team Yale has had since the days of Ted Coy. It isn't a team of individual stars. It is a team that has team work down to perfection.
And to Frank Hinkley head coach, belongs the full credit.

Last year Yale suffered from an overdose of coaching. About forty coaches circulated among the players and each had a different way of teaching. One coach would tell the players to hit a line this way and the next coach would come along and tell them that such a way was wrong.
He would urge his method. The third coach would come, overrule the orders of the second and issue some of his own. By the time the players had run the gauntlet of the coaches they were so bewildered they couldn't have told you who was king of England had you shot the question at them.

It's different this year. Hinkley is coach—the coach. No orders are issued unless they come from Hinkley or have the approval of Hinkley.
There is no conflict of orders or advice. It's a one man coaching system—and that system so far has shown itself a winner.

Bully for Hinkley!
